

Workplace Health Safety Environment Pulse Audit

Are your Workplace Health Safety and Environment policies effective?

Assuming your workplace is a safe environment for your staff can be very risky. With so many State and Federal regulatory and legal obligations, the need for compliance has never been greater. Therefore effective Workplace Health Safety and Environment policies and practices are essential.

Creating a safe work environment is a legal requirement and critical to the long term success of your business. Knowing and understanding WHS laws and how they apply to business will help you avoid unnecessary costs and damage to your business caused by workplace injury and illness.

Though it may cost to implement safe practices and install safety equipment, the effect of not taking action can be severe and costly.

Undertaking a Work Health Safety and Environment Pulse Audit is an excellent way to find out what are your risks and how are they being handled. Therefore learning what are your needs or what is missing from your Work Health Safety and Environment plans.

This is a wonderful way to show your staff that you truly care for them. And remember everyone loses out from any lost time injuries or illnesses. It impacts the financial security of individuals and the productivity of the organisation.